About El Pedral

Between the sea and the endless steppe, Estancia El Pedral stands alone in the vastness of Patagonia. Its historic tower, visible from afar, marks a place where privacy, silence, and untamed nature quietly set the tone.

Since 1923, this house has welcomed travelers in search of remoteness and hospitality, now reimagined as an intimate, immersive luxury stay.

El Pedral invites guests to experience Patagonia from within: walking among penguins, crossing wild landscapes, and discovering a regional cuisine deeply rooted in the land.

Understated elegance, quiet intimacy, and a deep connection with the surrounding wilderness define the spirit of the estancia.

THE LODGE

The eight rooms at Estancia El Pedral are designed for comfort, warmth, and privacy, immersed in a distinctly Patagonian landscape. Divided between two houses, each room features a private bathroom and shares, in pairs, a small entrance hall for coats and outdoor footwear, a classic estancia custom that gently keeps the outdoors from entering the indoors.

Double Room

King bed. Spacious and inviting, created for deep rest and quiet privacy in the Patagonian landscape.

Maximum occupancy: 2 guests

Twin Room

Comfortable and well-appointed, ideal for individual rest while preserving comfort and intimacy.

Maximum occupancy: 2 guests

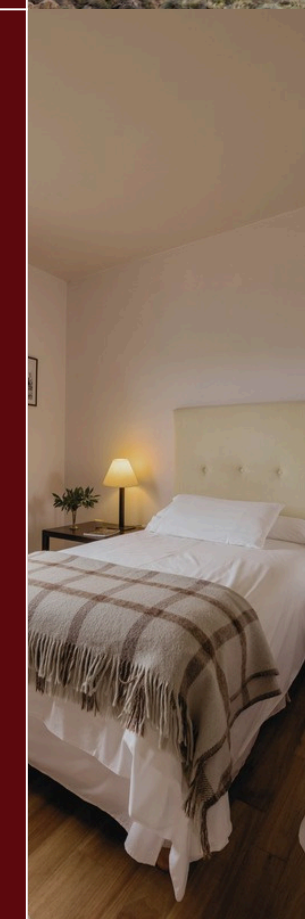

Facilities

The main house offers a variety of spaces where each guest can find their own place to unwind. The living room invites shared moments among travelers, while the reading room and library provide a quiet retreat.

For those seeking greater intimacy, the tower — with sweeping 360° views — offers a serene refuge.

Meals are served at the long communal table, centered around an original charcoal fireplace — a remarkable feature in its time.

Set apart from the main house and surrounded by trees that ensure shade and privacy, the “quincho” — the traditional Patagonian firehouse — becomes the ideal setting to enjoy the swimming pool in summer and dishes prepared over open fire.

Activities

Upon arrival, guests are introduced to the experiences planned for their stay. These vary according to wildlife seasons, weather conditions, unexpected sightings, length of stay, and guest interests.

A dedicated guide defines the activity for each day, confirmed the evening before.

During free time, guests are welcome to enjoy the library, the swimming pool, or self-guided walks across the estancia.

Below are some of the experiences that may be part of a stay at El Pedral.

Whale Watching from the Shore · Guided Walk

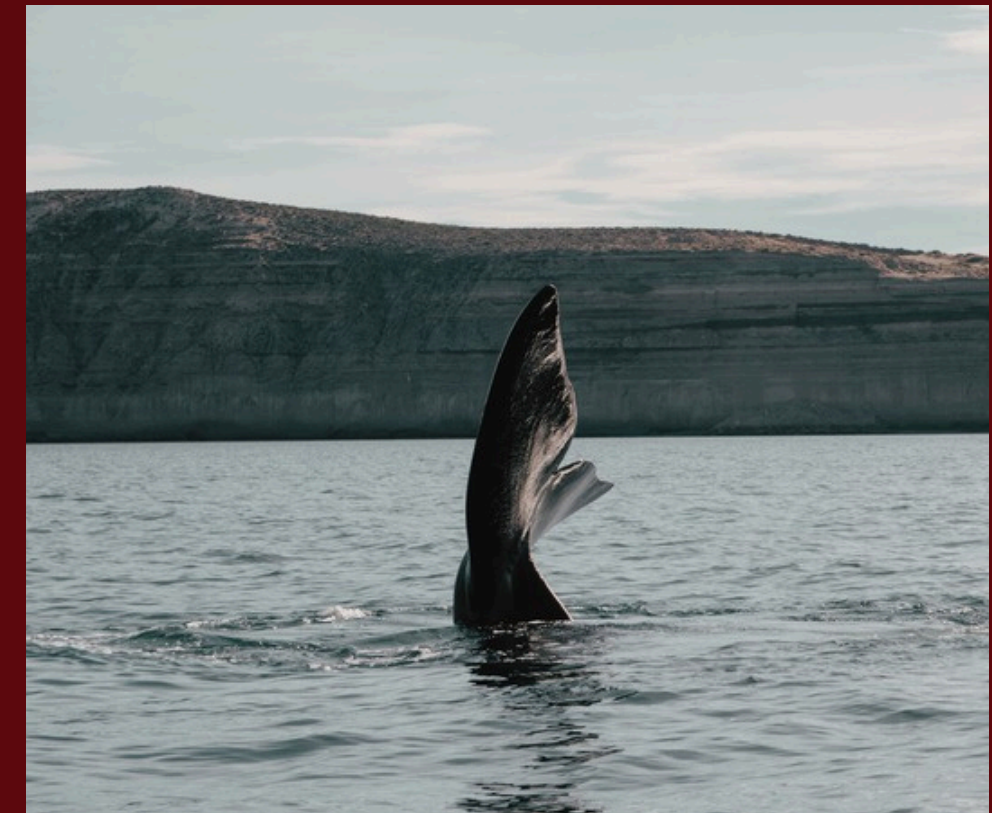

From El Pedral's coastline, southern right whales can be observed directly from land during August and September, often approaching just meters from the beach. At certain times of the year, orcas (killer whales) may also appear along the coast. Season: June to December

Penguin Colony Visit

During the season, the Magellanic penguin colony can be observed in its natural habitat. Outside the season, the walk reveals dramatic cliffs and unforgettable sunsets over the Patagonian coast. Season: September to March

Punta Ninfas Lighthouse

At the southern tip of Golfo Nuevo, this historic lighthouse rises above striking cliffs, offering panoramic ocean views and a privileged setting for sunsets and moonrises over the sea. Available year-round

Canyons to the Sea

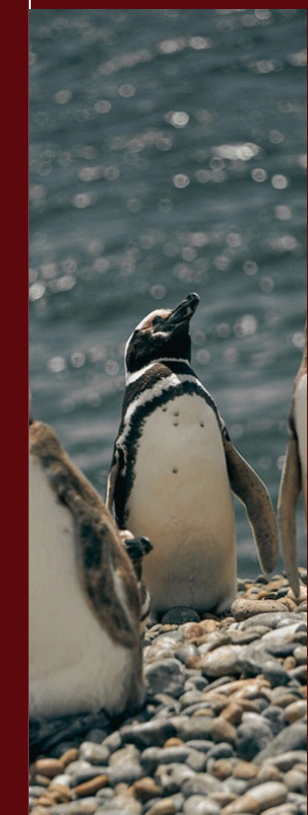

Explore ancient canyons and journey 30 million years back in time through sedimentary layers rich in marine fossils. The experience combines 4x4 exploration with guided walks across the steppe and along the cliffs, with opportunities to encounter guanacos, foxes, and rheas, and to descend to the sea at different points — sometimes even to enjoy lunch on the beach or within a natural shelter.

Southern Elephant Seal Colony

El Pedral is home to a remarkable colony of southern elephant seals. From September onward, males begin forming harems during the breeding season. The walk from the main house offers stunning coastal scenery and, depending on the time of year, the chance to spot whales, orcas, and seabirds in their natural habitat.

Cormorant Colony

Along the estancia's coastal cliffs, large colonies of cormorants nest during the breeding season. The walk from the main house combines sweeping Patagonian seascapes with the chance to observe these birds — and other coastal wildlife — in full activity.

Gastronomy

All meals at Estancia El Pedral are thoughtfully prepared by our chef, who works with premium ingredients and a cuisine deeply rooted in Patagonian tradition, with special emphasis on local products such as Patagonian lamb.

Dining is a central part of the experience, enjoyed at a long communal table that encourages shared moments and quiet conversation.

Daily meals include house wine, fruit-infused water, and mineral water.

A curated selection of wines and signature cocktails, thoughtfully chosen to complement the experience, is available upon request (at an additional charge).

Guests with dietary restrictions or special requirements are kindly asked to inform us in advance so personalized menus can be arranged.
